INDUSTRIAL RELATION UNSOUND

Prof. Taylor Says That Survival of Fittest Is Rule.

Prof. C. C. Taylor lectured Thursday afternoon at Stephens College on "Why the Present Industrial War." In his talk, he traced evolution of the present-day conflict between labor and capital. The modern inventions and factory system are responsible for the purely impersonal relationship between the employee and employer, he said. Doctor Taylor believes that the trouble with the present industrial system is that wealth is not judged by the service rendered, but by the survival of the fittest.

Until we measure our wealth by the human-yard stick and all workers have a decent standard of living, there can be no end to the present industrial war, according to Professor Taylor.
